

YOUR NEW LESSON PLANNING ASSISTANT

Document 1 of 4 · Read this first · For teachers

A short orientation — please read this once before you begin.

What is this?

Claude — an AI assistant — will now create your lesson plans for you. You upload the chapter from your textbook, answer five small questions, and you receive complete, ready-to-teach session plans built for your grade, your subject, and your chapter. It takes the writing and structuring off your shoulders, so your energy goes into what matters — understanding the lesson and delivering it well.

What will you receive?

For every chapter: a session-by-session breakdown for your approval, a colourful mind map of the full lesson for your children, a complete plan for each session, a visual recap chart to show at the end of every class, a ready-made Google Classroom post for each evening, and a one-page chapter summary at the end — handy for revision before assessments.

What does a session plan look like?

Before class — what to prepare: the outcomes, the content, the questions children might ask, the materials to gather, and a short self-check. Prepare well, and the lesson lives in you — not on paper.

During class — one clean sequence with timings. Connect to what children know, teach the key ideas, do an activity, check their learning — then the heart of every session: the story, where the concepts come alive through a character your children follow across the whole chapter. Every class closes with a short Takeaway.

After class — a few minutes of reflection, and the Evening Post.

How does the plan flex with your day?

Core — the six essentials, about twenty-five minutes.

Enhanced — the essentials plus enriching extras, about thirty-five minutes. This is your normal.

Full — everything, the complete forty minutes.

You choose your level while preparing. During class, if you are running behind, only the Story and the Takeaway always happen — nothing skipped is lost, as it reaches your children that evening through the Google Classroom post. You just copy, paste, and post.

What stays entirely yours?

The teaching. How you tell the story, how you answer the unexpected question, what you skip and what you savour — all yours. The plan is the map; you are the journey.

Your routine for every chapter

1. Generate all session plans at least a week before the chapter begins
2. Before each class — prepare from Part One and do the short self-check
3. Teach
4. After class — reflect briefly and paste the Evening Post

We built this so every child gets a thoughtfully designed lesson — and every teacher the time to deliver it wonderfully.
